REDS CALL GENERAL STRIKE IN ROME

ATOM SECURITY ACTION TAKEN BY COMMISSION

Special License Required To Make Or To Export Fissionable Material

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—The atomic energy commission acted today to strengthen controls governing export of fissionable materials, emphasizing that the move was in the interest of national security.

Under a new regulation, effective Nov. 20, a specific license issued by the AEC will be required for manufacture for export of any facilities for the production of fissionable material.

A license also must be obtained to transfer or acquire such facilities for export, or for actual shipment of such materials from the United States.

Commission spokesmen said the new ruling is not connected with recent reports that Soviet Russia has conducted atomic bomb tests. They pointed out that a tightening of export controls is required by the atomic energy act.

THE REGULATION will provide more rigid control over export of two specific classes of equipment. These are:

1. Any facilities capable of producing any fissionable material—for example, nuclear reactors, cyclotrons, or other particle accelerators.

2. Component parts of equipment suitable for service in connection with fissionable material—such as radiation detection equipment, mass spectrometers, and high vacuum equipment.

The regulation incorporates a provision for general licensing of all manufacture, transfer and acquisition of such equipment within the United States.

The commission said that in issuing licenses it will be guided by the following standards:

ASSURING the common defense and security; assuring an adequate supply of facilities for the production of fissionable material; preventing the use of such facilities in a manner inconsistent with the national welfare; effectuating the policies and purposes of the atomic energy act.

Licenses are to be issued subject to withdrawal at any time the commission decides that the public health, interest or safety are menaced.

Carroll L. Wilson, general manager of the AEC, explained in a letter to manufacturers and exporters that the commission will interfere as little as possible with normal business activities.

THREE ACCUSED OF BRIBERY IN $274,042 THEFT

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 15—Three Michigan businessmen were free today following their plea of innocence to charges of attempting to bribe a suburban Rossford Army ordnance civilian employee.

The three were released from Lucas county jail after being arraigned in Toledo federal court late yesterday. Judge Frank L. Kloebe set Jan. 5 for their trial after the trio waived grand jury action.

The three involved are Frank O. Blunden, 50, vice president of the Kramer Bros. Freight Lines of Detroit; Rodney B. Pierce, Detroit member of YACS and Pierce, Inc., dealers in trucks and trailers; and William J. Laughlin, 52, Grand Rapids, Michigan district manager of the Diamond T. Truck Co.

The employee, Stephen Flisek, has pleaded guilty of theft of $274,042 worth of government automobile engines. He was scheduled to be sentenced yesterday, but the sentence was referred to permit him to testify against the Michigan businessmen.

PARIS NEWSPAPER REPORT that stated the Russians had exploded a small atomic bomb in Siberia is disclaimed by John Griggs, the correspondent whose by-line was on the story. Griggs, who reads the account in his New York apartment, said the Soviets probably planted the propaganda story under his name because he was well known in Europe as a radio commentator for the Office of War Information.

German Newspaper Says Russian A-Bomb Blast Recorded In Stuttgart

LONDON, Nov. 15 — Reuters quoted a German newspaper today as stating that a Russian experimental atom bomb explosion had been recorded by the Stuttgart seismograph five months ago.

The Zeitung story quoted Dr. Hiller, director of the station, who said two abnormal tremors and weak long-distance shocks had been registered on the sensitive seismograph at 1:20 a. m. June 13.

Dr. Hiller said the instruments, which even register the surge of the Atlantic ocean from Portugal to Iceland, recorded a number of irregular waves.

These, he added, did not be-

ROCKET PLANT BLAST MAY HAVE BEEN SABOTAGE

AYLESBURY, England, Nov. 15—The possibility that sabotage may have caused the explosion at Britain's rocket experimental station at Westcott was explored today by high-ranking investigators.

Three persons were killed in the explosion, including Dr. Johannes Schmidt, 44, German rocket bomb expert who made V-rockets for the Nazis during the war. Twelve persons were injured.

Several of Britain's leading scientists were at Westcott investigating the explosion.

Security measures were tightened and armed police were ordered to patrol the several miles of security fencing encircling the station.

The friendship train will stop in Ashtabula, O., after leaving Cleveland and then continue on to New York.

LONDON JAMMED WITH NOTABLES FOR WEDDING

Common Citizen Brushes Reigning Royalty, Ex-Kings, Indian Princes

LONDON, Nov. 15—That terrifying American menace, the flying bobby-sox autograph brigade, would either die of joy or overwork in London today.

A common citizen can scarce go into a corner pub without brushing a reigning royalty, a pair of ex-kings and a covey of Indian princes on the way to the bar.

This town, on the eve of the wedding of Princess Elizabeth and Lt. Philip Mountbatten, is filled with rotagraves—faces—many in need of lifting!

CLARIDGE'S is royalty's home away from home in London. It has so many regal banners flying from its mast that it looks like a wet-wash laundry.

Most of the royalty at Claridge's now is unemployed, and one, King Michael of Roumania, holds his job by sufferance of Uncle Joe Stalin.

But in or out of jobs, former King Peter of Yugoslavia and his pretty young wife, are here for the wedding, and so is former Queen Victoria Eugenia of Spain, own granddaughter of Queen Victoria.

Even the Count De Paris, pretender to the non-existent throne of France is in London at the moment and biding his time at Claridge's.

However, he is not expected to put in an appearance at the Abbey, since it would scarcely be diplomatic or tactful to in-

FRENCH FIND ARMS CACHE IN RUSSIAN CAMP

PARIS, Nov. 15—French spokesmen revealed today that security police discovered an important arms cache in a Russian repatriation camp near Paris after massing 2,000 armed men and four tanks around the buildings.

The operation was conducted amid elaborate secrecy.

The Communist newspaper Ce Soir said the arms cache included 17 tommyguns, 52 clips of ammunition, a dozen rifles, seven revolvers and two cases of ammunition.

The Beauregard camp is a repatriation center for Russian refugees who want to return to the USSR.

PRINCESS WILL BREAK WHITE HOSE TRADITION

LONDON, Nov. 15—Princess Elizabeth will break tradition by not wearing white stockings at her wedding.

She will wear silk stockings of a neutral shade with reinforced tops to prevent runs when she kneels at Westminster abbey next Thursday.

The stockings, costing four dollars a pair, are reported to have the letter "E" topped by a crown woven into them.

BEFORE POLICE RESERVES THREW THEM OUT, Communist-led mobs wave red banners from the city hall in Marseille, France, after severely beating Mayor Jacques Carlini and eight city councilmen, followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle. Former Communist Mayor Jean Cristofol led the rioters, who dispersed following police action only to continue demonstrations in the city.

PRICE CONTROL BILL READIED

New York Democrat Would Give Rationing Power To President

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—Rep. Klein (D) N. Y., announced today that he will introduce legislation empowering President Truman to restore price control, rationing and the allocation of commodities.

Klein said that he would offer his resolution Monday at the opening of the special session of congress. He explained that the measure would give the President the same authority to combat inflation as the original price control act.

The congressman declared:

"I SHALL DO everything I can to insure prompt and serious consideration of my resolution. Without immediate effective action, the welfare of our country and the efficiency of our foreign aid program will be seriously menaced."

Klein asserted that "American consumers cannot pay 1947 prices on 1939 incomes and still maintain decent American living standards nor carry out an efficient foreign aid program." He added:

"Congress scuttled OPA. Now it is up to congress to rescue the American people from the fearful spiral of rising prices before we are sucked into a whirlpool of disastrous inflation."

Klein said that prices are now 60 per cent above 1939 levels and that averages incomes have not kept pace with the cost of living.

THIRD PARTY SEEN AS AID TO REPUBLICANS

CINCINNATI, Nov. 15 — Raymond Moley, political writer and former Roosevelt "brain trust," predicted today that the Republican party may defeat itself in the 1948 presidential race unless a third party appears.

Moley, a former assistant secretary of state, addressed the Queen city club at Cincinnati.

He predicted a GOP victory if a third party appears to split the Democratic vote. He added, however, that otherwise selection of a "smoke-filled room" Republican candidate will doom the party to defeat.

Moley said the high cost of government, more than the high cost of living will be a major campaign issue. He reasoned: "People don't know who is responsible for high prices, so that washes out as a political issue. The profound concern of the people is with cost of government."

DAMP, CHILLY WEATHER HOLDS ALL OF STATE

It was both damp and chilly over Ohio today.

A southwestern storm area moved into the state Friday night, bringing a little snow and sleet to some places as it advanced northeast.

Temperatures for the first time in several days remained above freezing Saturday morning. The mercury will range between 40 and 45 degrees today, with no appreciable fall Saturday night and Sunday is to be cloudy and somewhat cool.

The weather was unfavorable for the start of Ohio's hunting season, although a large number of nimrods took to the fields despite the rain.

YOUTH HELD IN STRANGULATION OF SWEETHEART

MASON CITY, Ia., Nov. 15—A husky 18-year-old Mason City high school senior was questioned by police today in connection with the mysterious strangulation murder of his 16-year-old childhood sweetheart, Arlene Mott.

Under questioning regarding the murder was Charles Ver Helst, a farm youth. Police Chief Harold E. Wolfe and Coroner Ralph E. Smiley said there were several discrepancies in his story of the tragedy.

The victim, a pretty high school junior, was found strangled Thursday night beside the youth's car which was parked in an alley at the rear of her home.

Police said Ver Helst told them he got out of the car to investigate a noise and was knocked unconscious by a mysterious assailant. The farm youth said he staggered to the girl's home and awakened her brother, Le Roy Mott, a mail carrier.

Mott found his sister lying face down near the car. The girl was dead when she arrived at Park hospital. An autopsy showed she died of strangulation.

82 Reds Jailed And 1,000 Held For Questioning On Rioting

MARSEILLE, Nov. 15 — French troops and police swooped down on Communist militants today in strike-bound Marseille, arrested 82 and held one thousand for questioning for possible connection with riotous disorders.

(A BBC report head by NBC said Communists occupied the Le Havre city hall and police and troops have been mobilized about the building.)

The French government took the offensive against the Communist-directed strike of 100,000 Marseille workers and ordered troops to unload ships in the port.

SPOKESMEN for the confederation of labor declared ominously that unloading operations by the 15,000 troops and mobile guards concentrated in Marseille will be opposed.

The Communists increased their agitation for a general strike although industries in France's second city already were virtually crippled.

Numerous incidents of vandalism were reported throughout the city. A number of trucks carrying raw materials and merchandise were stopped and overturned.

MICHEL CARLINI, the De Gaulle mayor who was mauled by the Communists and evicted from city hall, was temporarily in hiding because of fear for his life.

Two companies of state security police were dissolved on order of the French cabinet as a disciplinary measure for failing to deal with Wednesday's rioting.

The officers were suspended without pay. The companies were reputedly filled with Communists.

CHILLICOTHE ACCIDENT TOLL RISES TO TWO

CHILLICOTHE, O., Nov. 15—The second victim of a Wednesday night automobile accident was recorded today with the death in Chillicothe hospital of Grant Cline, 27.

Mob Of 1,000 Communists Storm Police Barracks To Free Slayers

ROME, Nov. 15—A general strike was called in Rome today in a Communist-led protest to the arrest of a trolley conductor while a wave of Communist violence struck at 106 Italian cities and towns.

A mob of more than 1,000 Communists assaulted the carabinieri barracks in the Tuscan city of Givusi in an effort to liberate five former Italian partisans held on a murder charge.

The Communists were beaten back by heavy police reinforcements. The Chiusi chamber of labor called a general strike to support the Communist demand that the prisoners, accused of murdering five policemen, be freed.

The strike call in the capital came despite efforts by officials to explain the conductor's arrest. It occurred when Communist agitators—including the conductor—mistook a public meeting for an Italian social movement demonstration.

POLICE forestalled an attempt by the Communists to break up the meeting and made the arrest.

The meeting which the Communists sought to disperse was of Italian prisoners of war returned from Russia.

Right-wing newspapers did not appear today as publishers refused to adhere to a printers' ultimatum that they print a leftist order-of-the-day demanding suppression of "neo-fascist" organizations.

The printers retaliated by refusing to set type.

The ministry of the interior indicated that the threat of Communist revolution which loomed over the country was definitely squashed despite the widespread violence.

FRIENDSHIP FOR BOY, 12, COSTS LIFE OF MAN

FINDLAY, O., Nov. 15—James Dale Cunningham, 42, of Findlay was dead today because he volunteered to take a small boy to a football game.

FIVE LEG DOG STILL HELD AT COUNTY POUND

Ownership of a five-legged dog which has been held for three days in the Pickaway County dog pound remained unknown Saturday.

Dog Warden Harry Riffe said he discovered the freak canine Wednesday afternoon in the eastern section of Pickaway county near the Fairfield county boundary. The animal wore neither collar nor license.

It is female, black, short-haired, about 4 months old, resembles a wire-haired terrier, is uninjured and apparently healthy, and has three legs in front and two behind. The fifth leg is slightly longer than the others.

CONSERVATION OF SOIL CITED AS PROFITABLE

Boggs Says Cash Aid Given To Farmers Is Returning Big Dividends

Soil conservation costs money but the results justify the expenditure it was declared Saturday by John G. Boggs, chairman of the Pickaway County AAA committee.

Financial assistance given to the farmers by the agricultural conservation program, he said, represents only a small part of the total costs of conservation.

Mr. Boggs asserted that in the first place the farmer himself stands about one-half the cost of the practices and these practices then act as a stimulating force which encourages farmers to carry out practices in addition to the ones for which they receive ACP assistance.

He said that it should be thoroughly understood that conservation practices, whether carried out by the government directly or by aid to farmers does cost cash and that the question is one of determining the method of obtaining the most conservation for the lowest cost.

THE GOAL in Ohio's 88 counties, Mr. Boggs pointed out, is to gain a maximum amount of conservation for each dollar expended. The goal, he added, has been the guide for the AAA county committees throughout the state during the past year.

It has become a program policy, Mr. Boggs explained, to shift emphasis to new practices after original ones become established. In this way the assistance to farmers several years ago is continuing to return conservation dividends even though aid is not given under the current program.

Thus, he said, the dollar spent by the government for conservation under the ACP program is returning manifold in conservation accomplished.

YOUNG DEMOS NEAR CLOSE OF STATE SESSION

CLEVELAND, Nov. 15—Resolutions and elections were on the agenda today as the young Democratic Clubs of America went into final sessions of their convention in Cleveland.

Three assistant cabinet secretaries, Girard Davidson, interior, David Morse labor, and Edward Foley, treasury, were to participate in a topic session on "Young Democracy" this afternoon, prior to election of officers.

Democratic National Committee Chairman J. Howard McGrath told the delegates last night that President Truman's message to congress Monday will contain "a well-rounded program for solution of the high cost of living problem and for interim aid to Europe."

The senator from Rhode Island added that "I can say that, during the trying, hectic days following his call of the congress to special session, he has been closeted constantly with economic advisers from all segments of our economy."

HUNDREDS OF U. S. CITIZENS HELD IN RUSSIA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—Several hundred American citizens are being held in Russia and Soviet Satellite countries despite repeated efforts by the state department to help them return to the United States.

Reliable sources in Washington disclosed today that the Russians often move these Americans to other parts of the USSR when U. S. embassy officials seek to check on their whereabouts.

Many of the Americans, mostly of foreign descent, were deported to Russia from occupied areas in Europe after Soviet authorities refused to recognize their United States citizenship.

Authoritative spokesmen said that some of them are being used by the Russians as slave laborers, just as in the case of Irma Mohaupt, Cincinnati, O., girl who recently escaped from a Soviet labor camp where she was held for three years.

HUNDREDS OF U. S. CITIZENS HELD IN RUSSIA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—Several hundred American citizens are being held in Russia and Soviet Satellite countries despite repeated efforts by the state department to help them return to the United States.

Reliable sources in Washington disclosed today that the Russians often move these Americans to other parts of the USSR when U. S. embassy officials seek to check on their whereabouts.

Many of the Americans, mostly of foreign descent, were deported to Russia from occupied areas in Europe after Soviet authorities refused to recognize their United States citizenship.

Authoritative spokesmen said that some of them are being used by the Russians as slave laborers, just as in the case of Irma Mohaupt, Cincinnati, O., girl who recently escaped from a Soviet labor camp where she was held for three years.

An entry bearing the signature of Common Pleas Judge William D. Radcliff and filed in the office of Clerk of Courts Arthur L. Wilder said the removal was ordered because jail residence is "jeopardizing" the health of Schwalbaugh.

Building Christian Character

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for November 16 is II Peter; Jude; Luke 24:52, the Memory Verse being Luke 24:40, "And the Child grew, and waxed strong, filled with wisdom; and the grace of God was upon Him.")

PETER, IN his second epistle to his fellow Christians, reminds them that they have become "partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust."

"And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity."

"For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

These are the steps in building a Christian character. We have all the materials needed, but they must be assembled according to the laws that govern them so that they will stand the buffeting of life, just as a building made of wood, brick or stone must be erected according to the laws of physics so that, when built, it will not collapse when storms blow.

"What does it mean to be 'fruitful'? In a tree the leaves, bark, wood, branches and blossoms are all for the tree's welfare, but the fruit is the product of the tree's life and helps the health, enjoyment, strength and enrichment of mankind. Virtue is for our own good, but if we follow the advice Peter gives in his letter, and 'add to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity,' we will be fruitful; we cannot help it. We will help others and convert them to our own faith by our lives."

Peter writes thus because he knows his time on earth is short and he wants his friends to remember his words when he is gone. The epistle of Jude (who is, he says, brother of James, and therefore a member of the family of Joseph and Mary of Nazareth, brother of Jesus), is occupied with the question of those who have fallen away from the faith, "ungodly men," and the fate that is in store for them. "Woe unto them!" he writes, "for they have gone in the way of Cain," etc.

Again we have the story of Jesus' boyhood, one of the very few related in the Bible: Every year at passover time Joseph and Mary left their home in Nazareth and joined a pilgrimage to Jerusalem. When Jesus was twelve years old they took Him with them.

When the passover was over, or, as Luke tells us, "when they had fulfilled the days," they started back home, but Jesus, unnoticed by them, stayed behind in Jerusalem. Joseph and Mary sought Jesus with other members of the company also returning to Nazareth or other places near by, so when He did not join them they began a search "among their kinsfolk and acquaintance."

Not finding Him, they turned their steps again to Jerusalem, looking for Him. For three days they searched for their son, doubtless ill from worry. At last they found Him in the temple, "sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions."

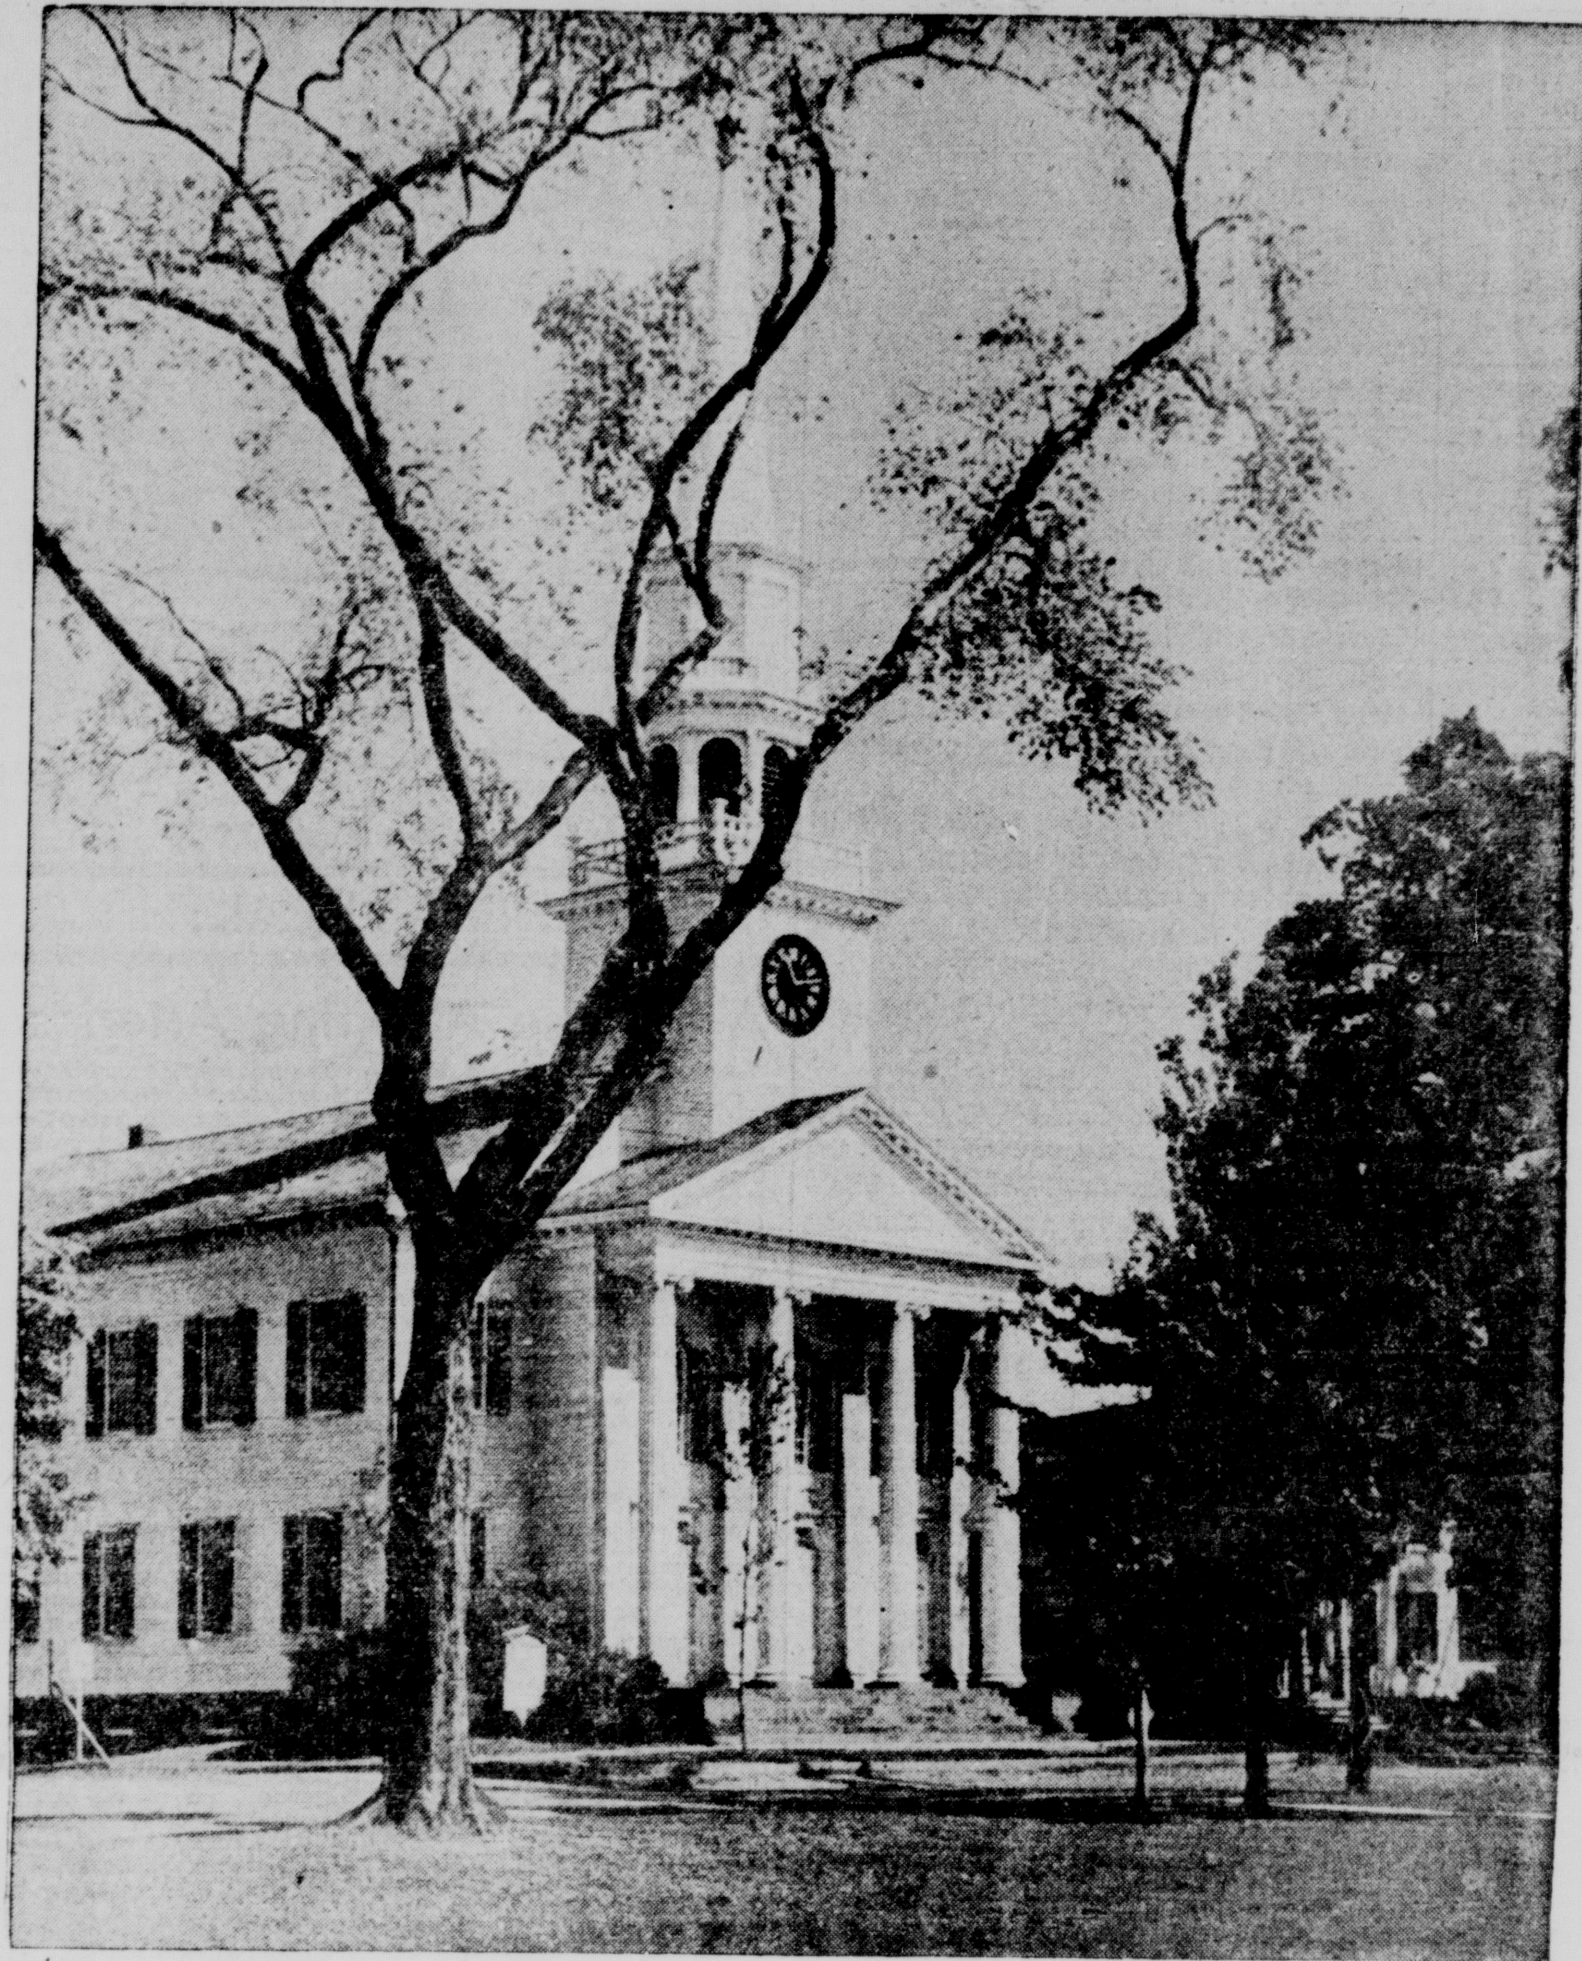

Amazed at finding Him there and seeing how familiar He was with these learned men of the temple, His mother said to Jesus: "Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? behold, Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing."

Quite unconscious that He had caused His parents worry, Jesus answered simply: "How is it that ye sought Me? wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?"

This is the first intimation that Jesus knew of His divine mission on earth, and that He expected that His earthly parents understood it too.

But they "understood not the saying which He spoke unto them." He went with them back to Nazareth and was a dutiful son thereafter. "But His mother kept all these sayings in her heart," and pondered them while the boy Jesus "increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man."

Three Centuries Of Life

The Congregational church shown here is a "mere" century and a quarter old, but the idea for its building may have originated more than 300 years ago in its environs.

For here, in Guilford, Conn., still stands the oldest stone house in New England, built in 1639, and now a museum for visitors of the Atomic Age.

Guilford is the town with the most authentic old "saltbox" houses.

The old colonial architecture of this church, with its clock and towering steeple, make it a thing of beauty. It is built on the usual "village green."

Within the portals of this church, like all other Christian churches, God has dwelt among the worshippers. Man has risen to the spiritual heights in surrendering himself to the will of his Creator.

Regular attendance at the church of one's choice on Sunday and the various religious days has been a privilege of every American since the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Freedom of religion is an American institution as old as America itself.

The youth of tomorrow—the leaders in the new age in world history—need the church and its opportunities for prayer and worship if they are to direct the destiny of America into the pathways that are eternal.

Excerpt from Teachings of the BAHAI FAITH

"What the world has regarded as individual beliefs are not separate religions. Instead, they are successive stages in the constantly evolving ONE RELIGION of God, constituting the vehicle for His continued and progressive revelation to man, though given at different times, to different people, through different recognized Prophets of God."

These are the steps in building a Christian character. We have all the materials needed, but they must be assembled according to the laws that govern them so that they will stand the buffetings of life, just as a building made of wood, brick or stone must be erected according to the laws of physics so that, when built, it will not collapse when storms blow.

What does it mean to be "fruitful"? In a tree the leaves, bark, wood, branches and blossoms are all for the tree's welfare, but the fruit is the product of the tree's life and helps the health, enjoyment, strength and enrichment of mankind.

Virtue is for our own good, but if we follow the advice Peter gives in his letter, and "add to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity," we will be fruitful; we cannot help it. We will help others and convert them to our own faith by our lives.

Peter's Time Short
Peter writes thus because he knows his time on earth is short and he wants his friends to remember his words when he is gone.

The epistle of Jude (who is, he says, brother of James, and therefore a member of the family of Joseph and Mary of Nazareth, brother of Jesus), is occupied with the question of those who have fallen away from the faith, "ungodly men," and the fate that is in store for them. "Woe unto them," he writes, "for they have gone in the way of Cain," etc.

Again we have the story of Jesus' boyhood, one of the very few related in the Bible: Every year at passover time Joseph and Mary left their home in Nazareth and joined a pilgrimage to Jerusalem. When Jesus was twelve years old they took Him with them.

When the passover was over, as Luke tells us, "when they had fulfilled the days," they started back home, but Jesus, unnoticed by them, stayed behind in Jerusalem. Joseph and Mary supposed Jesus was with other members of the company also returning to Nazareth or other places near by, so when He did not join them they began a search "among their kinsfolk and acquaintance."

Not finding Him, they turned their steps again to Jerusalem, looking for Him. For three days they searched for their son, doubtless ill from worry. At last they found Him in the temple, "sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions."

Amazed at finding Him there and seeing how familiar He was with these learned men of the temple, His mother said to Jesus: "Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? behold, Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing."

Quite unconscious that He had caused His parents worry, Jesus answered simply: "How is it that ye sought Me? wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?"

This is the first intimation that Jesus knew of His divine mission on earth, and that He expected that His earthly parents understood it too.

FAVORITE BOOKS

SEVEN BOOKS have sold more than 2,500,000 copies each in the United States, says Frank L. Mott, author of "Golden Multitudes, the Story of Best Sellers". He means through the years, that is, not in a single year. Guessing their titles might be a possible form of entertainment for a party. They are a varied lot:

Shakespeare; The Plays
Unknown; Mother Goose
Scott; Ivanhoe
Stowe; Uncle Tom's Cabin
Mitchell; Gone With The Wind
Wallace; Ben Hur
Carnegie; How to Win Friends and Influence People

It speaks well for the Americans that in the seven there is only one piece of tripe. Fourteen more have sold more than 2,000,000 copies each and here popular taste is not quite so solidly dependable. Some of these are excellent in taste and execution—but not all. They are:

Dickens; A Christmas Carol
Sheldon; In His Steps
Southworth; Ishmael
Cooper; Last of the Mohicans
Alcott; Little Women
Defoe; Robinson Crusoe
Douglas; The Robe
Hargrove; See Here, Private Hargrove
Hurlbutt; Story of the Bible
Twain; Tom Sawyer
Stevenson; Treasure Island
Smith; A Tree Grows in Brooklyn
Carroll; Alice in Wonderland
(Does anyone, by the way, still read Mrs. Southworth and the Rev. Charles M. Sheldon?) The fourteenth is one of the most recent, and its popularity is highly creditable to the American people. It is Wendell Willkie's "One World".

American literary taste, when examined, stands up pretty well.

ENGLISH SMOKING

THERE is almost no limit in the extent to which Britain carries on, making sacrifice after sacrifice. The latest abstention is tobacco. Non-smokers may smile at this, but to men accustomed to tobacco, and particularly men who have so little, any form of indulgence means much.

And what becomes of the tobacco? Uncle Sam buys it and smokes it. And he doesn't need it, either, because there is plenty of tobacco in this country. It must go hard on those Englishmen, the way things work out. But their heads are still up.

As far as Henry Wallace is concerned, the fellow at the next desk says he has a feeling that he could go to the uttermost parts of the earth, and when he woke up next morning, Henry Wallace would be right there with another goofy idea.

Britain seems to be getting Americanized and starting at the bottom. Frinstance, some farmers now have to watch at night to keep their sheep and cattle from being stolen.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

It has been suggested to me that I have erred in applying the Preamble of the Constitution to the obligations of Congress. The Preamble, setting forth the reasons for having a Constitution, provides:

1. To form a more perfect union; 2. to establish justice; 3. to insure domestic tranquillity; 4. to provide for the common defense; 5. to promote the general welfare; 6. to secure the blessings of Liberty. . .

All that follows the Preamble, implements it. Having stated the objectives, the Constitution establishes the machinery for their accomplishment. Story, in his classic, said of the Preamble:

"... It is an admitted maxim in the ordinary course of the administration of justice, that the preamble of a statute is a key to open the mind of the makers, as to the mischiefs, which are to be remedied, and the objects, which are to be accomplished by the provisions of the statute. . ."

While the Preamble itself does not grant powers, it does imply obligations. As Story continued:

"... It is an admitted maxim in the orditure, and extent, and application of the powers actually conferred by the constitution, and not substantively to create them. . ."

The Constitution was a difficult document to write and that it has continued as our basic law for 160 years establishes the wisdom of those who produced it. This country at that time was being governed by the Articles of Confederation, which established not a government but a compact among sovereign states. If the nation were to survive, a government with powers had to be formed and those powers required the respect, support and compliance of the people. The Preamble to the Constitution then stated the objectives, provided the political philosophy, and offered a guide.

To those of us alive today, the phrase, "a more perfect union" may, in our historical ignorance, seem puerile. But that is only because we fail to realize how little union existed when the Constitution was written and that a war among the states had to be fought some 70 years later to establish its authority.

My point, in a previous column, was that the Thomas Committee, as a part of Congress, had the obligation to concern itself with that clause in the Preamble which dealt with "domestic tranquillity." The Federalist points to the small causes which may disrupt domestic tranquillity:

"The influence which the bigotry of one female, the petulance of another, and the cabals of a third, had in the contemporary policy, ferments, and pacifications, of a considerable part of Europe, are topics that have been too often descanted upon not to be generally known."

And then, Alexander Hamilton, who wrote this particular article, adds:

"But notwithstanding the concurring testimony of experience, in this particular, there are still to be found visionary or designing men, who stand ready to advocate the paradox of perpetual peace between the States, though dismembered and alienated from each other. . ."

In another article in The Federalist, Hamilton continues the argument by stating the entire issue before the Thomas Committee today:

DIET AND HEALTH

A Disease Affecting Arteries

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

IN choosing their victims, some diseases seem to be "sex conscious." One such ailment is Burger's disease, which attacks men almost exclusively. Doctors call this condition thrombo-angiitis obliterans, a name which indicates that there is spasm of the arteries, together with inflammation of the arterial lining, sometimes, blood clot formation.

In the vast majority of cases, the arteries of the legs are the ones chiefly affected. Symptoms consist of pain in the legs, particularly after exercise, coldness of the legs, blueness of the skin in the affected area, and occasional limping.

Cause Unknown

The underlying cause of thrombo-angiitis obliterans is unknown, though it is thought that an excessive use of tobacco may be a factor. This view is supported by the fact that most of those who develop it are heavy smokers, but, on the other hand, the disease has been known to occur in some who have never used tobacco at all.

In treating this condition three things are necessary: first, to prevent any injury or infection; second, to promote circulation and, third, to relieve pain.

Avoiding Injury

The avoidance of injury to the skin is most important. In general, it is best to avoid the use of antiseptics on the skin unless they are gently cleaned each day with soap and water. The slightest injury or scratch to the skin may lead to infection, and infections in these cases are dangerous and may develop into gangrene.

Care should be taken in cutting the nails to make sure that the soft tissues are not injured. If there are any corns or blisters, they should be taken care of by the doctor to make sure that no infection may occur.

The feet should be protected particularly from excessive heat or cold. In the winter, the patient should wear warm socks and large, loosely-laced shoes.

To aid in improving the circulation, liberal amounts of water should be drunk. The diet should be rich in proteins, such as are contained in meat, milk, and eggs, and should, of course, supply all the necessary vitamins and minerals.

Form of Treatment

One form of treatment frequently suggested is to inject a salt solution into a vein every second day, or about three times a week.

If exercise causes pain, the patient should remain at rest in bed for a time. A certain type of exercise has been suggested, called Burger's exercise. In carrying this out, the leg is raised for a minute, lowered over the side of the bed for a minute, and rested for five minutes. When the leg is hanging over the side of the bed, the patient should move the foot and the toes.

Pain may be controlled by the use of such drugs as the salicylates. There is an operation known as sympathectomy, in which the nerves running to the arteries are cut. This operation has been found helpful in some cases.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

S. L.: Is there anything that can be done to get rid of superfluous hair on the upper lip?

Answer: Probably the best method to remove superfluous hair is by the electric needle. When properly performed, this method is permanent and leaves no scars. Excess hair may also be removed by depilatories, but by this method the hair grows again. X-ray treatments should not be used to remove hair because of the possibility of permanent injury to the skin.

A skin specialist should be consulted regarding the removal of superfluous hair.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

ANNETTE brought in the three glasses (Alison had sherry and Suzy fruit juice) on a silver tray—just as Teresa and Suzy came in. "The flowers are dead," Teresa said. "I wonder why Annette didn't throw them out. Don't pluck the fur, Suzy. Never pluck at fur." She picked up her glass eagerly. To the fire she said, "Sam's driving out tomorrow afternoon. He'll have dinner with us."

"Daddy!" Suzy exclaimed.

"Yes, dear, Daddy. Will you be glad to see him?"

"Oh, yes."

"If you think of it, ask him for a picture. There isn't a picture of Sam in this house. He probably hasn't had one taken since he was graduated from college. I don't remember his ever having a picture of himself. But you should have a picture of your father in your room, darling." She opened the cigarette box and asked, "Cigarette, Alison?"

"No, thank you."

"How can you possibly drink anything and not smoke? Isn't the weather beastly? I've never liked the summers here but I think I'll welcome it this year. We can go down to the farm for weekends." She smiled. "If only I could talk Sam into improving the place. A new bathroom at least. I'd loan him the money."

She was looking into the distance beyond the walls when she said, "What a nice feeling we have toward each other now. He was so pleasant today when he called me. I could see him in that funny little office of his frowning over an editorial that those farmers probably won't bother to read. Such a waste of his talent when he could be here or in New York on one of the big papers or magazines."

"He doesn't want that."

"How do you know what he wants? He'll grow tired of skimping along, living in a house that's falling down on his head, worrying about the bills his father left and the puny circulation. He could be a big and powerful man. He could write above the heads of those farmers he writes for now."

"You forget, Teresa, Sam is a farmer."

Teresa nodded self-assuredly. "It's just a phase. Post-war sort of thing. You have to go along with them until they come out of it. I've had no lunch. This cocktail has gone straight to my head. No, Suzy, you may not take the muff in to dinner, darling. And try, please, not to drop everything. Perhaps your father was right in insisting that you have dinner with me but he isn't here to see that there are more potatoes on the carpet than in your tummy."

Your father . . . Your father . . .

"You're very quiet tonight, Alison."

"Am I? More than usual?"

Suzy reluctantly put the muff aside and rushed ahead as Annette announced dinner.

After dinner Teresa went to the kitchen to talk to Annette about the menu for tomorrow's dinner. Special for Sam. Alison went upstairs with Suzy and waited while the child played with a toy swan in her tub. Suzy was hilarious tonight, full of nonsense and mischief. Alison put her candy-striped pajamas on her, turned down her bed, kissed her good-night. Teasingly Suzy clung to her hand, begging for a story, a "real" story, an amusing one, from Alison's own childhood. Suzy was more diverted by "real" stories than by fairy tales. A few minutes later she turned on her side, clutched the rag doll. Alison turned out the light, raised the window and closed the door. The quiet end of a child's day.

Downstairs she found Teresa reading a news magazine. She glanced up quickly at Alison and with a deft finger, a finger that never missed or fumbled or turned two pages instead of one, turned a page. Teresa seemed to read a page at a glance. She had enormous and enviable powers of concentration. She did not learn patiently step by step. She seemed to seize a subject and grasp it with her whole being. She had small patience with waiting.

Alison picked up her knitting. The needles would not obey. They wanted to fall out of her hand. She dropped stitches. The wool stuck to her moist hands. She put it aside, got up and spread her hands toward the fire. Her breathing seemed to be loud and labored like that of a person on the operating table. Outside a siren wailed. She picked up her knitting again and made herself do 10 rows without stopping.

Teresa lay the magazine on the table. She touched her smooth face, saying, "I haven't had time for a facial for weeks. No reason why I can't give myself one." She flicked a bit of ash from her white blouse. "If I can slip out for a few hours tomorrow I'll look for a dinner dress. The war is over. I must get the habit of dressing for dinner again when there are guests. . . You've been working on that sweater for months. How much longer are you going to be? Well, I'm going to putter around a bit with self-improvement. This new cream I have is quite good. Good-night. You'll see that the doors are locked and that the ash trays are washed before you come up, won't you?"

"Yes."

Teresa stood up. Her hands on her slim hips were like a caress as she smoothed down her skirt. Her face had an imperishable quality as though age would not dare strike it ever. Gold lights shimmered in her hair. Alison glanced quickly at her hair and then away. She felt as if she were blushing. The color of Teresa's hair had changed. It was lighter. It was like Kitty's who had bleached hers. Teresa was bleaching her hair.

Teresa's eyes were making fun of her. "You're very quiet tonight. But then I suppose you always are. But you are a nice person, Alison. There's depth and sweetness in you. Only I can't make up my mind where you belong. Have you seen Philip lately?"

"We had lunch on Saturday."

"You told me. I remember now."

Alison looked up. "I don't belong here and I don't belong with Philip. I don't belong here because there is nothing here I can call my own and a girl or a woman feels she's only a transient when there's nothing of her own. And I don't belong with Philip because no matter how much he gave me or how hard he tried, I'd always feel like a poor relation."

Teresa nodded. "Waiting. We're both waiting. You don't know what you're waiting for. But I'm waiting for Sam to ask me to marry him. One of the curses of being a woman. You have to wait for them to ask you."

"Why do you want Sam, Teresa?"

"Why? Why do you want a dress you see in a window? You want it, that's all. You can't explain it. There's not much reason in business. But you can't reason with your emotions. Does a man marry a girl because she can cook, because she'll be a poised hostess to his friends, and sweet to his mother? No. He marries her because he wants her. . . This isn't getting my face done. Good-night, dear."

Alison looked at the clock. She waited an hour. The longest hour she ever knew. The fire died and a chill came over the room. She took out the ash trays to the kitchen, washed them and brought them back. She bolted the doors and turned out the lights and walked up the stairs.

But tonight was not like every other night because she turned to the right, not to the left. She turned toward Teresa's room and went in.

It occurred to her now how few times she had been in this room, so few that for a few moments a part of her mind was occupied with it. A large, high-ceilinged room with plain, peach-colored walls. The antique bed was huge with massive posts and a white organically canopy. The white quilted spread almost touched the floor. The chaise longue was pale green.

There was a large mirror above a fine old chest and another over the dressing table and still another in the door. The pictures were flower prints, vivid; a host of them grouped together. There was mail in a neat pile on the Heppelwhite desk with the slender, tapering legs.

"The Authority on Authorities"

SHOOTING THE WORKS

MAYBE it doesn't pay in the long run, but the "shooting the works" kind of tactics certainly will put excitement into the game. The chaps who are inveterate addicts of such druggy maneuvers will sometimes argue that they gain more than they lose because of them. Right or wrong, so far as points are concerned, one fact is undeniable—they get enough fun out of putting one over to make up for their losses on several other occasions.

This time North was more than glad he passed the double. Gil West would lead his partner's spade suit. He was just as confident of such psychological factors as he was of his ability to read a lead, once it had been made. He proved to be absolutely right. West, not wishing to give the declarer a cheap trick in hearts with probably a guarded king, did lead a spade, his 10.

Now can't you visualize the glee on the face of Gil Meyers as he scored nine very rapid tricks in the black suits, then threw the rest of his cards in with a triumphant laugh!

Your Week-End Question

Why is the underlead of an ace against a suit contract usually more risky than the underlead of a king?

Gilbert T. Meyers of Scarsdale, N. Y., who made that funny 3-No Trump bid in the South, loved to perpetrate just that type of fancy play.

ABC may put the Donald O'Connor show on the air as a sustainer gambling on its sale to a couple of interested sponsors. Bing Crosby starts cutting two shows a week on an indefinite schedule to beat the Petrillo recording deadline. If he holds the schedule, the program backlog will carry it into May. Mutual may spot "Johnny Modero" again after the New Year. Gasoline sponsor looking over new shows to replace "We the People". Mouth wash sponsor has optioned a Wednesday evening CBS spot with the Abe Burrows show as a likely entrant. Martha Tilton is scheduled to take over the female vocal spot on the CBS Dick Haynes show the early part of December.

Although Horace Heidt has been scheduled to replace Milton Berle on NBC in December, the recent 2.3 increase in Berle's Hooper may keep the show on the air. Cigarette sponsor may still keep Heidt and spot the ork on another network since NBC time slots are filled.

The New York office of the Canadian Press, wire service which supplies coverage for Canada, phoned the home of Percy Faith, Toronto-born conductor, to check reports on the maestro's death. Faith, interrupted in the midst of his lunch, came to the telephone himself, to give Mark Twain's time-honored response on his supposed demise.

Washington dopsters predict that the Thomas Un-American Activities Committee will begin investigating radio early next year. Radio execs, mindful of the Hollywood probe, are already consulting high-powered attorneys, it's said. Starting Jan. 3, Fred Allen will be getting his paycheck from a new sponsor, an auto company. Allen said to be unhappy over the present commercial setup, which includes the singing commercial.

Abe Burrows, the comedian who takes Tin Pan Alley tunes apart, will go commercial in the near future, surprising no one in the industry. Burrows was tagged a click from his first broadcast. Every time Tommy Cook, who plays Jr. Riley on "The Life of Riley" (NBC Sat. 8 p. m. EST), has trouble with Chester Riley over allowances, the young actor receives scores of letters from young listeners offering their sympathy. Incidentally, it's expected that Cook will play the Jr. Riley role in the Universal film version and there's talk that the vehicle may springboard him into the Mickey "Andy Hardy" Rooney groove. Songstress Peggy Lee is very ill and will be away from the mike for at least a month. Henry Morgan due back in New York in a few weeks. Perry Como is slated for the Valentino role in the long postponed film on the life of the great screen lover. Hotel men agree that hotel rooms in class hotels will feature video sets within five years. Despite the fact that Burl Ives is busy with a film career, his own radio series (Fri. MBC 8 p. m. EST), and a concert schedule coming up, the balladeer is still a lazy guy. In his recently completed film, "Green Grass of Wyoming," his part called for him to heft and carry a log a few times. Burl protested so vehemently, an actor had to be hired just to tote the log, "That's really work," said Burl, adamantly.

Thirty-three names associated with music complete the membership of NAB's industry music committee, designed to force a showdown with Petrillo. Radio Manufacturers Association seeking to reach a four-sets-per-family goal. The "Chicago Theater of the Air" has secured rights to six American operettas which have not been heard on the air for several years. RCA's income revealed as four million dollars above same last year. Veterans Hospital Camp Shows, Inc., sponsored by the major webs and other allied entertainment organizations, will be the successor to USO-Camp Shows which is being discontinued. The airing of Tom Breneman's "Breakfast in Hollywood" from Madison Square Garden in New York Oct. 31, attracted 18,275 visitors and netted the Damon

Circleville Anxiously Awaiting Decision On Factory Location

DIRECTORS WILL RULE AT MEET NOVEMBER 20

Plant Would Add Million Dollars A Year To City's Labor Payroll

Final decision on the proposed building of a new modern two and one-half million dollar factory in Circleville is scheduled to be made when the board of directors of an unnamed company meet next Thursday, Nov. 20, at New York City.

In the event the decision is to build the factory in Circleville—and this is deemed probably—approximately 700 persons mostly women and girls will be given employment in the plant and the annual payroll will total close to $1,000,000.

In a recent survey the Chamber of Commerce and the Ohio State Employment Service jointly listed the names of 1,302 applicants for jobs in the factory and this list was dispatched to company officials. The list included the names of 976 women and 326 men. The recruiting drive was staged over a 10-day period. Company officials had already tentatively selected Circleville as the site for the factory but this was reportedly dependent upon obtaining the names of at least 500 prospective workers.

If the company's board of directors decides to establish the plant in Circleville, it was learned Saturday, work on construction of the factory will begin about Jan. 1, 1948 and about seven months will be required to complete the building and to place the factory in operation.

In such event the company will also build some houses for key men in its organization.

THE CHAMBER of Commerce was the prime mover in bringing the factory to Circleville. Only members of the Chamber's industrial committee know the name of the company and these members are pledged to secrecy.

The name of the company cannot now be divulged because of the inconvenience which would be caused to company officials by other communities seeking to obtain the new factory.

However, it can be revealed that the company is one of the largest of its kind in the entire world and that it has an international reputation.

for return to the Army on a promise to make good the losses to the check victims, but Judge Lamb rejected that plea after Johnson said that up until the time Sheriff Charles Radcliff and deputies nabbed him Nov. 7 in the Ashville banking company at Ashville he had no intention of returning to the Army.

Testimony disclosed that between Oct. 27 and Nov. 7 the youth cashed the bogus checks at the Circleville Savings and Banking company and the Third National bank, Circleville, and at two banks in Washington C. H. He was attempting to cash another $160 forged check at Ashville when arrested. Sheriff Radcliff told the court that when the boy was searched no money was found.

Officials of the two Circleville banks and of the Farmers National bank, Williamsport, identified Johnson and the fraudulent checks. One of the checks bore the spurious signature of the youth's aunt who lives in Circleville.

The boy's parents, Williamsport residents, said they thought he was home on a furlough.

On Oct. 25, the boy's father gave him $15 and put him on a bus for Columbus in the belief the son was returning to the Army at Fort Jackson, S. C. Instead the youth went to Washington C. H.

Before sentencing him to Mansfield reformatory Judge Lamb reminded Johnson that on Feb. 27, 1947 he was in Juvenile court charged with burglary of the Johnson Drug store at Williamsport on Jan. 23, 1947, and that at that time Johnson was freed on five years probation.

Sheriff Radcliff said he had received from the Army an official notification that Johnson was absent without leave.

"In republics, persons elevated from the mass of the community, by the suffrages of their fellow-citizens, to stations of great pre-eminence and power, may find compensations for betraying their trust, which to any but minds animated and guided by superior virtue, may appear to exceed the proportion of interest they have in the common stock, and to overbalance the obligations of duty. Hence it is that history furnishes us with so many mortifying examples of the prevalence of foreign corruption in republican governments."

Story, commenting on this, says:

"domestic factions may well be expected to arise, which, when honest, may lead to the most pernicious public measures; and when corrupt, to domestic insurrections, and even to an overthrow of the government."

The Thomas Committee would be unmindful of its obligations if it ignored the constitutional behest to insure the domestic tranquillity, for such is the duty of all three branches of our government. It is very easy for small and unimproved minds to pick and choose the obligations with which they care to be burdened. The complete citizen is the one who accepts the entire constitution and abides by it. For upon it America stands firm; without it our country falls to faction and strife.
